River & Ravine

Temple rugs

DESCRIPTION

Pure Northern California. The design began as a wire and plaster sculpture, spray-painted and gashed with a pocket knife – all made under towering redwood trees. From there, Hildebrandt photographed details of the piece, worked with the yarns to create the moody palette, then finally with the craftspeople to carve ravines out of the luxurious wool and pure silk. The resulting RIVER & RAVINE borrows heavily from the landscapes: dry and flooded rivers, setting sun on the Pacific, golden hills and dark, foggy green valleys.
